Produce Quiz

Last Quiz Answer:
PEAS

I am famous for playing hard to get, but I'm coming soon. The few that are graced with my presence find me on small tropical trees in Vietnam, Thailand, Cambodia, Sri Lanka, the Philippines, as well as Hawaii. I am the reigning queen in the Guttiferaceae family and you must refer to me as the "Queen of the Tropical Fruits." I grow at my own leisurely pace, and although it's usually in a timely fashion, I won't be hurried. I am difficult to propagate and will easily get persnickety. My thick, vibrant skin is simply stunning. While I might share the same purplish red skin color as a pomegranate, please, give me a break, I am significantly more beautiful both inside and out. My insides are segmented into adorable pulpy white/ivory sections. My pulp is sensually delicate, yet powerfully sweet and juicy. My amazing exotic flavor has been described as a mixture of pineapples, apricots, oranges, and grapes. One taste will bring you to your knees as I melt in your mouth. If you must, I can be pureed as a topping, used for ice creams or sorbet, or tossed in a fruit salad, but if it's my essence your after (and who isn't?) all you need do is spoon me right out of my skin. I think the Indonesians have it best because that is where I am most abundant. Can you believe they actually use me in recipes for pickles and vinegar? Such a waste! If you're like me and blessed with a fabulous sense of fashion, I'm probably on your shoes, wallet, or gloves as the tannins from my skin are used as a dye. I contain potassium and vitamin C and just for fun, I threw in some iron and niacin. I have no religious affiliations, sound like a fruit I am not, and if found on mainland USA I am almost always radiant.
